

Humanities Course Requirement

University General Education Requirement

As of Summer B 2012, the university's general education program has been changed to require students to take HUM 2305, What is the Good Life, to fulfill 3 credits of the Humanities designation. The description of the general education requirements in the catalog has been updated to include this requirement. The following UF students are exempt from this requirement.

- (a) AA transfers from the institutions in the Florida College System and State University System who have satisfied their institutions' general education program prior to entering UF.
- (b) Students enrolling in the Innovation Academy for the first time in Spring 2013.
- (c) Students enrolled in fully online degree programs. Students enrolling in these programs in the future will be required to take this course when it becomes available online.
- (d) Students who matriculated at UF prior to Summer B 2012, and who are required by the University or their colleges to change to the current catalog year. This exemption does not cover students who elect to change to the current catalog year.

Completion Requirement

The eight semester plans of all majors have been modified to include HUM 2305 as a required course which is recommended to be taken and passed in the first two semesters of full-time enrollment. Although the course has not been added to the universal tracking requirements for any degree program, steps are being taken to monitor students' registration to insure that they complete this requirement within this timeframe.
